Verbatim Growth Monthly Market Commentary - January 2023

After a difficult 2022, the start of 2023 saw a significant improvement for global equities, which rose 4.7% in January for sterling investors as markets processed corporate earnings results and central bank signals for potential easing as macroeconomic data weakened.

In regional terms, UK large-cap equities ended the month up 4.3%, largely driven by their exposure to commodity sectors despite accelerating inflation data and a disappointing economic outlook for the region. US equities rebounded from the previous month's dip returning 3.8%. The US technology sector also rallied 8.2% for the month. With markets expecting the US Federal Reserve to slow down the pace of interest rate rises and with fourth quarter earnings driving sentiment, returns saw an uptick. European equities also had a strong month, climbing 6.8% and proving to be more resilient to the energy crisis and rising prices than expected. Worries around the pace of monetary policy tightening remained in the region, but positive economic data such as a falling headline inflation rate created some optimism in the markets.

In other regions, Emerging Markets rose 5.4% in January on the back of positive sentiment driven by the lifting of the zero Covid-19 regime in China and the expectation for growing global demand following the reopening of economic activity. Japanese equities also posted positive returns, up 3.8% over the month as monetary policy from the Bank of Japan remained loose with interest rates staying at ultra-low levels. In commodities, oil prices ended the month down 2.8%.
